British Values

A guide for parents and carers

What are ‘fundamental British values’?

Schools are required to provide for the spiritual, moral, social and cultural (SMSC) development of their pupils. As part of this requirement, schools are expected to actively promote fundamental British values.

The government defines these as:

- Democracy
- The rule of law
- Individual liberty
- Mutual respect and tolerance of different faiths and beliefs

What does this mean for my child?

Schools’ programmes for learning about fundamental British values are designed to prepare children and young people for life in modern Britain.

This includes helping pupils understand:

- The importance of combatting discrimination
- How we can influence decision-making by taking part in democratic processes like voting and petitioning
- Our freedom under British law to choose different faiths and beliefs
- That the law is there to keep us safe

What does this look like in our school?

Include details of your school’s approach to British values here. This might include information about:

- How British values are reflected in the school’s ethos
- How British values are embedded in different curriculum subjects
- How teaching about British values will be adapted for the age/maturity of pupils
- Pupil councils and other forms of democracy in action
- How the school will teach about tolerance and combat extremist views

Frequently Asked Questions

Can my child still express his/her faith at school?

Absolutely. One of the fundamental British values is respect and tolerance of people with different faiths. British law protects people’s freedom to hold their own beliefs.

Any prejudice or discrimination towards pupils on the basis of their faith goes against the fundamental British values and will not be tolerated.

How will this affect my child’s lessons?

The curriculum provides lots of opportunities to look at fundamental British values. Your child may already have some experience of this in lessons such as religious education (RE) and personal, social and health education (PSHE).

Schools should look out for these opportunities and encourage children to think about how the values link into the topics they are studying.

Will this change the school’s ethos?

Our school’s ethos already includes many aspects of the government’s fundamental British values.

Promoting fundamental British values reinforces, and does not change, our ethos.
